

The publication 'Early Tudor Craven: Subsidies and Assessments 1510-1547' issued by the Yorkshire Archaeological Society, Record Series Vol 145, should be consulted for a full description of the Loan Book of 1522.

The assessment was undertaken nationally with a twofold use: 1) It was a detailed census of the nation's military resources, both in manpower and weaponry. 2) It was a detailed fiscal assessment. A commission issued in March 1522 demanded every township should supply a muster of all adult males with a notice of each man's lord or master, with detailed assessment of all property and individual wealth. This was superseded by a new commission July 1522, which was used to solicit of those assessed at £20 or more a loan for the government at the minimum rate of 10% of the assessment. This loan was to be repaid from the next grant of taxation made by parliament. It was used a second time when the Crown demanded loans of 10% of their assessment from those worth £5-£20. The Craven return, the only surviving return for Yorkshire, doesn't record the possession of arms, and so might have been compiled under the second (July 1522) commission.
